Time to celebrate

It seems to me that of all the emotions we experience a jubilee is one of the most gratifying. Easter is certainly the right time to experience joy beyond normal. The darkness of the weather and our own darkness of soul can lead us to an even greater celebration at Easter. The Lord who came to die for my sins is no longer dead. HE LIVES!!

During Holy week we have encountered the dark days. We behold the unbelievable cruelty of man against man. Consider your feelings – pain, anguish, sorrow, tears, anger, fear and many other unbelievable concerns for why and when the pain will be healed and the joy returns. Jesus took that and as we confess – declared victory over death by rising on the third day. Say it again – HE Lives!!!

We have the opportunity to live with newness of life. This will lead us to celebrate the resurrection. Though Easter is a day – I invite you to make it a season of life. Each day of life can be a day to remember and rejoice.

The events we face in our lives can be of great help as we seek to serve the risen Lord. As we begin a new quarter now is the time to seek ways to voice His message. I am struck by the many who have yet to see or experience the joy that comes when sin is forgiven. In our guilt ridden world where it easier to blame than to accept responsibility, I invite you to spend time thinking carefully about how you will become actively involved in telling the redemption story.

Andre Crouch asked – “How can I say thanks for all the things you have done for me?” Why not make that a personal question? Then allow God’s Word to penetrate your heart and ask Him to reveal the path that is yours to say thanks. It could be a call, a prayer, a song, a meal, a note to someone forgotten, ....!

Keep the list growing and as you help another do so because you have been redeemed and you cannot help but celebrate!

One of the helpful ways to know what to do is check out what is happening at church – get involved – learn and then seek to make the message known in your sphere of influence.
